

PRESERVATION OPPORTUNITIES ON THE LINCOLN HIGHWAY 2010 Nomination Form

The Lincoln Highway Association identifies, preserves, interprets and improves access to the Lincoln Highway and its associated sites. It all began in 1913 when a group of American industrialists envisioned a “continuous, improved highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific.” Today, the road stretches from New York City to San Francisco and contains a rich collection of historic resources including original brick sections of the road, historic markers, roadside amenities and attractions. Some of these resources are thriving, others are in need of some tender loving care.

Preservation Opportunities on the Lincoln Highway calls attention to the many historic resources that are endangered. For the purpose of the list, endangerment is defined as threat of demolition, significant deterioration, vandalism, alteration, and/or loss of context. It is our belief that publication of this list will draw national attention to the plight of Lincoln Highway historic resources and promotes local action to protect resources. We prefer to think of these resources as opportunities for preservation rather than at risk of loss. The announcement of the 2010 Preservation Opportunities list will be made at the National Conference in Dixon, Illinois in June 2010.
